

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Roberta Nauman

0151703

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kim Seals

0151704

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

In the 21st century, contraceptives should be a non-CONTROVERSIAL no brainer & basic human right for women; For those who oppose abortion, CONTRACEPTIVES SHOULD BE SOMETHING THEY SUPPORT---and their opposition should make HHS QUESTION WHAT THEIR AGENDA REALLY IS.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.
DO NOT ALLOW THE CATHOLIC CHURCH AND FUNDAMENTALIST PROTESTANTS TO IMPOSE THEIR RELIGION ON ALL OF US.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lydia Howell

0151705

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Susan Lynch

0151706

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Salim Ali

0151707

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Dan Moorman

0151708

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tracy Blount

0151709

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Anne Anglim

0151710

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Leigh Ann Spence

0151711

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Concetta Gleason

0151712

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Simanton

0151713

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Terry Strauss

0151714

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Clayton Graham

0151715

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elisabeth Hershey

0151716

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Edward Mitchell

0151717

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Rodolfo Franco

0151718

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Patrick McGorty

0151719

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Karen Fishkin

0151720

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Benjamin Thomas

0151721

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Keith Runion

0151722

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joe Keller

0151723

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joe Keller

0151724

Aug 31, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Vince Mendieta

0151725

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Nancy Berkheiser, M.D.

0151726

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jessica Miller

0151727

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Harald Matej

0151728

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Edward Sauer

0151729

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Glenn Thompson

0151730

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bob Fischella

0151731

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Birdie Blaine

0151732

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sherrell Cuneo

0151733

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Hill

0151734

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carol Schultz

0151735

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Rhonda Elsen

0151736

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tom Sanchez

0151737

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sarah Freshley

0151738

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Abigail Woodward

0151739

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Laru Dekock

0151740

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Suzanne McManus

0151741

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. C. Blackman

0151742

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

IF YA LET GET TAKEN AWAY OUR "RIGHTS" THEN ALL US SMART
STRONG WOMEN ARE GONNA LEAVE THIS COUNTRY AND TAKE OUR SPENDING POWER
WITH US. DO YOU NEED ANY BIGGER REASON THAN THAT. AND I WOULD LIKE IT
IF YOU WOULD KICK A LITTLE MORE REPUBLICAN A PLEASE!

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. valerie mcnulty

0151743

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

When I was in my 30s, I wanted a tubal ligation. I was unable to get it under the aegis of the Coast Guard [in which I was an active duty member at the time], because they had a contract with a Catholic hospital. I feel that was unfair to me as a service member and undermined my religious liberty. My personal decision concerning my body did not accord with Catholic precepts, so I was denied coverage of a routine procedure.

I have always felt strongly that good birth control and prevention is better than the alternatives.

Make birth control affordable! NO Exceptions!

Sincerely,
Ms. M J Millard (USCG, Ret.)

0151744

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. vik sarakula

0151745

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Danny Dwinell

0151746

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Patricia Fontana

0151747

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

Show some backbone. Protect choice from the right-wing nuts. You continue to "compromise", they continue to take turf.

Sincerely,
Dr. Michael Healy

0151748

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Anne Moore

0151749

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Shana Tighi

0151750

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Diego Estrada

0151751

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gustavo Gil

0151752

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mike Bell

0151753

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Shelby Solomon

0151754

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joost Meijer

0151755

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. russell Davis

0151756

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Sarah Avery

0151757

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joanie Laine

0151758

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Harper

0151759

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ch. Rosen

0151760

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Patricia Carltpn-McQueen

0151761

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Joe Everette

0151762

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us. Indeed, one wonders why any religious institution would feel the need to enforce their beliefs upon their faithful employees in this manner when the employee would be within their rights to leave such benefits unclaimed for religious reasons voluntarily at any time. But, I expect my government to assure that this exception be appropriately limited in its application, in a practical manner, to those for which it was intended and not to broaden its application.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jed Ivory

0151763

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Mary Gaillard

0151764

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. James Pate

0151765

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Grace Wamble

0151766

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David King

0151767

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Handy

0151768

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cindy Melbie

0151769

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Loretta Thompson

0151770

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Keep religion out of a woman's rights. Contraceptive services should be made more available to prevent unwanted pregnancies not less! Stand up for all women not just the few.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kick Anna

0151771

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sylvia De Baca

0151772

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jason Burgess

0151773

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Kimberly Christensen

0151774

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. ed bebelheimer

0151775

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joan Robertson

0151776

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Elizabeth Felton

0151777

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Andrew Windsor

0151778

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Zaroff

0151779

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cynthia Hellmuth

0151780

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mike Young

0151781

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lindsey Shere

0151782

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Alessi

0151783

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Leann Ramirez

0151784

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Antonia Salaz-Siania

0151785

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Fleming

0151786

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Juan Galindo

0151787

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Donnella Mitchell

0151788

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Laura Sternberg

0151789

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gregory Kampwirth

0151790

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ross Votaw

0151791

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. sennja joyner

0151792

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elizabeth Demirjian

0151793

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gerardo Cornejo

0151794

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jill Harris

0151795

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Rudy Shafiq

0151796

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Astaunda

0151797

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Ewald

0151798

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Brooke Clyde

0151799

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Peter Brackner

0151800

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Birce Altiok

0151801

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception should be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that each of us should be free to make personal decisions, including whether and when to use birth control, based upon our individual beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles Kocher

0151802

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Oscar Brambila

0151803

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Alec McDougall

0151804

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Maria Salazar

0151805

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Audrey Rosser

0151806

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Christine Tonry

0151807

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Kenneth Berri

0151808

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. James Pate

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Stephen Jung

0151810

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jason Reid

0151811

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jim Magaw

0151812

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Eldon Leuning

0151813

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joy Quick

0151814

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss Kristine Andarmani

0151815

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Troy Schreiber

0151816

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Freedom of choice over our own bodies is a basic right. Each person should have the means and opportunity to avail herself of any and all services and information in order to make an informed choice. Reproductive matters should be in the hands of women, and they should be able to choose what is best for them without restriction.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cindy Spencer

0151817

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Doug Wagoner

0151818

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Martha Champion

0151819

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Marconi

0151820

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

Remember contraceptives prevent abortions.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Stan Sheldon-Lander

0151821

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Schaffer

0151822

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Stallman

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Helena Caston

0151824

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Jaime Nahman

0151825

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles Kingma

0151826

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Loui Franke

0151827

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Smith

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Paul Ellison

0151829

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tyreece Rogers

0151830

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Diane Alpern

0151831

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Sims

0151832

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Peggy Ochoa

0151833

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Dunn

0151834

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ron Edwards

0151835

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles McIntyre Jr.

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Laura Huddleston

0151837

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sally Rosoff

0151838

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Vince Mendieta

0151839

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Those who WANT to live in a country where women have no reproductive rights should move to Afghanistan or Saudi Arabia and let the rest of us enjoy the freedoms enshrined in our legal code.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kimberly Nelon

0151840

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Please, protect a woman's right to chose and to access what they need to protect themselves in any manner they choose.

Sincerely,
Mr. mike fabi

0151841

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Linwood Morrison

0151842

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Beverly Jennings

0151843

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families

Despite aggressive actions on the part of the religious right, I believe most Americans still believe in the separation of church and state. When religious organizations become as political as they have in more recent years, it is very evident that they have no intentions of remaining in their place. Please do not allow them to continue to chip away at our hard earned reproductive rights by not allowing any further compromising of the Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines. Thank you for continuing to listen to women. They do know what is best for themselves and their families.

Thank you !

.

Sincerely,
Ms. Betty Deugenio

0151844

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Annmarie Sauer

0151845

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cindy Chilton

0151846

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cathy Galligan

0151847

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cathy Galligan

0151848

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gregory Robert

0151849

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Benjamin Oppenheim

0151850

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Bash Sher

0151851

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gordon Macginitie

0151852

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

I am Catholic and I appreciate your sensitivity in making an exception for religious institutions, but I wish my religion and others would realize that family planning and access to contraceptives is not pro-abortion but rather very much pro-life.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elizabeth Sheppard

0151853

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Katelyn Finn

0151854

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Beth Fiedorek

0151855

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judith Sweeney

0151856

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

The Republicans' attack on women's reproductive rights abhors me. I vote and I advocate for rights for all Americans. I view them as cowards and un-American.

Sincerely,
Mr. DUANE WALL

0151857

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Betsy Wolf-Graves

0151858

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lynda Naclerio

0151859

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss Caitlin Russell

0151860

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jordan Tjersland

0151861

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jenny Diehl

0151862

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Robin Denaro

0151863

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeffrey Lutes

0151864

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. danny grantham

0151865

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

Contraception is every womans right! This is anpersonal matter and it MUST NOT BE ALLOWED TO BE DICTATED BY THE GOVERNMENT!!! i amnsixk and tired of polititians trying to find any way they can to affect a womans reproductive choices! This is blatently outside the boundaries of the government/ citizen relationship! There are fundamental rights that ALL people must have that government MUST RECOGNISE is NONE OF THEIR BuSINESS! A womans right to choose birth control, a womans right to choose abortion, a persons right to marry the person of their choice regardless of gender, these are the most obvious examples, yet they continue to be the most controvercial! Why? It all comes down to CHOICE! We all have the right to choose for ourselves! No one else can xhoose for us! Just because you have your viewpoint - for whatever your reason (ie: religious beliefs) , does not give you a superior right to mine! Particularly religious reasons as no two religions ever seem to agree on anything! How would it EVER be resolved if not by the person themselves to make their own choice?!!! I am really getting tired of repeatedly having to tell the government to get out of my life and out of my reproductive and relationship desisions!! Thank you, Kimberly Rice The following is a form letter statement i also agree with.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kimberly Rice

0151866

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. martin kroon

0151867

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Eric Schultz

0151868

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Fritz

0151869

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Zoah-Henderson

0151870

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Sunil Misra

0151871

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carol Peterson

0151872

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy Skeeen

0151873

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nicole Kowach

0151874

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Alberto Rivera

0151875

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lisa Dowling

0151876

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

I don't understand why this is an issue. I strongly support coverage of ALL health care deemed medically necessary by a person and his or her doctor.

Sincerely,
Ms. Christine Abbey

0151877

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Lucien Fontaine

0151878

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Priscilla Elfrey

0151879

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Sampey

0151880

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Do NOT allow religionists the excuse to discriminate, while hiding behind their 'holy scriptures'. That's setting up a double standard.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jason Brose

0151881

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Parrish

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Corinna Hasbach

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alexis Montgomery

0151884

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Anna Berg

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Greg Tutko

0151886

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Gustafson

0151887

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Connie Day

0151888

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Barbara Ringhiser

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tom Huber

0151890

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jeane Garrett

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bernard MARCHOIS

0151892

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ana Alvarez

0151893

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Nicholas Stancioff

0151894

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Katherine Hix

0151895

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss Cynthia Feranandez

0151896

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jordanna Freedman

0151897

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel Hereford

0151898

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Evan Kegley

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Health Care is a Right, not a privilege for those who have discretionary funds. Health Care also is a private matter, not to be infringed upon by others who have different views.

Sincerely,
Ms. M. Gladis

0151900

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

A woman's privacy and rights concerning her body is no business of employers or government!

Sincerely,
Ms. Tish Wilson

0151901

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Would also like to add on a personal note that fanatical religious groups, be they Muslim or Evangelical Christians, need to keep their personal views to themselves and stop worrying about what their neighbors are doing. The sad truth is that the world is overpopulated. People are going to continue to engage in sex for pleasure, and therefore need a way to curb population growth. Period.

Sincerely,
Mr. Perry Jock

0151902

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tim Maness

0151903

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Andrea Chipman

0151904

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Brian Plummer

0151905

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Fitzgerald

0151906

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Gouvas

0151907

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us. The separation of church and state is vital. Forcing religious beliefs upon the general population is unconstitutional and unfair.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Thank you for your time in reading this letter. Remember, the more unwanted babies the more medicare and welfare dollars we need to spend. And those dollars do not even cover the NEEDs of the children born.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mary Peterson

0151908

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Audrey Beavers

0151909

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

Religious organizations should have no say in governmental policies in the United States of America. Governmental policies should have no say in a person's personal life choices.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel Page

0151910

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Carol Sperry

0151911

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Ellanor Revenga

0151912

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Alana Gielczyk

0151913

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Webster

0151914

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ameneya Phillips

0151915

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Jacqueline Thomas

0151916

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Darren Albertson

0151917

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Craig Martin

0151918

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Abraham Omorenimwen Oboruemuh

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ghida Banat

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Donald Williams

0151921

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Stone

0151922

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Karen Hochman

0151923

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Abraham Omorenimwen Oboruemuh

0151924

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Marshall Sutherland

0151925

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kathleen Rothwell

0151926

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Spitzer James

0151927

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carolyn Johnson

0151928

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Brian Schoenwandt

0151929

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

As a clergyman, I believe that HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Terry Heislén

0151930

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Larry Walden

0151931

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeremy Faulkner

0151932

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Heidi Parvela

0151933

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jess Freeman

0151934

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dane Swindell

0151935

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would greatly harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us, which would be intolerable.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions, such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Marilyn Voorhies

0151936

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Donna Lehnus

0151937

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Amy Biggs

0151938

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Amy Biggs

0151939

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

thank you Francis Garcia

Sincerely,
Mr. Francis Garcia

0151940

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. George Hughan

0151941

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Emmalee Clark

0151942

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Dannie Hart

0151943

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tim Herman

0151944

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Nicole Tscheligi Frenk

0151945

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Franziska Wittenstein

0151946

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Andrew Mccowan

0151947

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss Heather Southerland

0151948

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Shaun Melvin

0151949

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Spencer Selander

0151950

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Barbara Hall

0151951

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gregory Leduc

0151952

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. pasqual pelosi

0151953

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Kenneth Ruby

0151954

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Haines

0151955

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Harvey Miskerik

0151956

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Fields

0151957

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Jacquie Billing

0151958

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tony Lortz`

0151959

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Minerva Hallowell

0151960

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Diana Cioffari

0151961

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Crystal Foster

0151962

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Vicki Morris

0151963

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Susan Wuerl

0151964

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Stephanie Mitchell

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. M. Voronovszky

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Julie Burns

0151967

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Naomi Peck

0151968

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

As a physician retired from a practice of pediatrics in an underserved innercity community, I found access to resources to pay for contraception was imperative for family planning, and onerous impediments to choice for needed procedures often guaranteed larger than desired family size, that in turn thwarting plans for maternal education and/or employment.

Sincerely,
Dr. James Leu

0151969

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Louise Jacob

0151970

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Louise Jacob

0151971

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us. This is very important to maintain the principle of separation of church and state which is a cornerstone of American values.

Therefore the Department of Health and Human Services should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families. Thank you so much for your consideration. This is a crucial time in America for the preservation of our core values.

Sincerely,
Ms. Donna Buell

0151972

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jacqueline Konwinski

0151973

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Gunther

0151974

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Emerelle Rhodes

0151975

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Stephen Critelli

0151976

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kamau Odinga

0151977

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tierney Grinavic

0151978

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Martin

0151979

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Matt Coles

0151980

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Daniel McCaffrey

0151981

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mike Raymond

0151982

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Hart

0151983

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kevin Devone

0151984

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robyn Harber

0151985

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of a particular faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us. Denying women access to contraception essentially makes them slaves to particular religious beliefs, even though they may not share those beliefs.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families. While I would not force a religious institution to provide contraceptive services, neither would I deny those services to any woman who needs them. Do not broaden the exemptions--they go plenty far enough. Do not allow government to interfere with women's reproductive rights.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mary Lambert

0151986

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Deborah Rotunda

0151987

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. sue johnson filley

0151988

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ginny Goormastic Basaric

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Laminda Mozon-Whitfield

0151990

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. marilyn rowse

0151991

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alison Krich

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Anneke Corbett

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joan Baur

0151994

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Steven Royce

0151995

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ananda Richmond

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Barry Hart

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. shon michael

0151998

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Pat Smith

0151999

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kenneth Mostella

0152000

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Wade Wasserman

0152001

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janice VrMeer

0152002

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Fred Rakevich

0152003

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nicole Torgesen

0152004

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Jane Morgan

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

Women should have the only say over their Bodies. This is Opression 7
Slavery and Un Constitutional to take any rights away.

I for One was raped by an Uncle and got Rid of the Bastards baby I didn't want nor did I want a constant Reminder of even tho the baby didn't asked to be conceived. It was against My Will and done the best thing for the both of Us.

Stopped a Life time of Hell and Toment. I'm 59 now and still have bitterness about it. This man even raped his own daughter & made her have the baby, who was miserably treated all his life. He should have served LIFE.in prison and didn't. Found out "WE" were nt his only victims he had many, He deserves to rot in Jail then Hell. but won't because they let him out. Justice was not Served.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mary Blair

0152006

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Lee

0152007

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Andrea Taylor-Blenis

0152008

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Paul Dembski

0152009

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Paul Dembski

0152010

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Arthur Roach

0152011

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Marjory Stanley

0152012

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. gene Groom

0152013

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Philip Gallo

0152014

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Christopher Davis

0152015

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Shannon Caruso

0152016

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Claire Welt

0152017

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Miller

0152018

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Conn

0152019

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kristin Hurley

0152020

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Georgiana Wells

0152021

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sara Paulson

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Alter

0152023

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Abdul-aleem Ahmed

0152024

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gabe Ormsby

0152025

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

I don't believe anyone should deny a woman the right to affordable contraceptives. There should be no question about them being covered by medical insurance, especially since there doesn't seem to be any problem with men getting their Viagra pills at an affordable price as well as getting them covered under their health care insurance. Since women bear the result of "Viagra and the lack of affordable contraceptive products", the choice is most definitely ours. Please support the Women's Preventive Services Guidelines.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Brown

0152026

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Follman

0152027

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles Wood

0152028

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Alexander DeSantiago

0152029

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Humam Talhami

0152030

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Christine Welch

0152031

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Leo Frumkin

0152032

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sherry Frumkin

0152033

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jennifer Thompson

0152034

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. George Bullock

0152035

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Amy Mass

0152036

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kristen Zehner

0152037

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kristen Zehner

0152038

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Terri Mittenenthal

0152039

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Matthew Kimball

0152040

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Curtis Skurka

0152041

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Victoria Hall

0152042

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Netii Ross

0152043

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Mosher

0152044

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Maria Jackson

0152045

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

If the anti-choice people agree legally to adopt and bring up the to-be aborted fetuses as soon as they are born, OK; also they should bear the cost of the birth.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Therese Tanalski

0152046

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine First Amendment-guaranteed religious liberty for all of us.

Many people object to abortion, including I. However, our feelings on this subject are not an appropriate basis for law. Making sure that women have access to contraception is one way to reduce the number of abortions without denying women their rights established under Roe v. Wade. Moreover, millions of women have medical conditions that make pregnancy too dangerous for them (and/or the fetus). Others require medications that cannot be taken during pregnancy. Such women absolutely need to be able to obtain birth control.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Dan Muldoon

0152047

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elizabeth Johnson

0152048

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Ng

0152049

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Christine LeBeau

0152050

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jean Dunlap

0152051

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kathryn Smith

0152052

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Vanderhoff

0152053

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. M Gutierrez

0152054

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mairi Meredith

0152055

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

It's time to stop buckling in the name of compromise to any and all hiccups from the right. The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Linde

0152056

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Drew Peltier

0152057

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Elaine Warren

0152058

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barb Fitzgerald

0152059

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Kim Burke

0152060

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Edward Connors

0152061

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new Health and Human Services policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services.

I urge you to see that this exception is limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Thank you.

Sincerely,
Ms. J Rigney

0152062

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Fussiner

0152063

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Moszyk

0152064

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Rebecca Glenn

0152065

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Carroll Munz

0152066

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Amendola

0152067

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy Bush

0152068

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John C. Betz

0152069

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Martha Molpus

0152070

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Audrey J. Scotti

0152071

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. kurt adelberg

0152072

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jonathan DeKock

0152073

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jerry Garcia

0152074

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. GERALYN LEANNAH

0152075

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Marcia Hopkins

0152076

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Gayle de Mille

0152077

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Paul Curtin

0152078

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carolyn Mills

0152079

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Britton Saunders

0152080

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Garber

0152081

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alice Speakman

0152082

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Arthur Coates

0152083

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us. Women should have the right to contraceptives without having to have their employer approve it!

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Crystal Depew

0152084

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Gayle Cormier

0152085

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. peggy shannon

0152086

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Alison Simmerman

0152087

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. KEVIN RILEY

0152088

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Lori Kegler

0152089

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Schricker

0152090

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Especially, if a "Catholic" hospital is the only option for some women, then by law they it should honor the right that an American woman has, to choose such an option as abortion. It is deeply troubling to me that the so-called religious rights of an institution, should mean more than the human rights of an American citizen!

Sincerely,
Ms. Virginia DeHaan

0152091

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Ruth Butler

0152092

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Andrew Segal

0152093

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sharon Rothe

0152094

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Please keep women safe and in control of their own bodies.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nancy Peterson

0152095

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ann Yoder

0152096

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Leonard Harris

0152097

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Sinda Nichols

0152098

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Darcie Deaville

0152099

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Helen Johnson

0152100

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Lynn Miller

0152101

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jacqueline Votaneck

0152102

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Gaidry

0152103

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Kathryn Scott

0152104

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Emma Steiner

0152105

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles Ripp

0152106

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Cory

0152107

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Wales

0152108

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Gail Laker-Phelps

0152109

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sharon Villagomez

0152110

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

Women who work for these religious employers can decide what is best for them rather than having the employer decide for them. It is likely that they may not choose to use it. But they should have the right to choose as any other woman.

Sincerely,
Ms. Catherine Dorner

0152111

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Wiseman

0152112

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judith Linden

0152113

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Julia Imbarrato

0152114

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Brook Boese

0152115

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mary Ann Fleming

0152116

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Christopher McCluskey

0152117

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jillian Elliott

0152118

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. George L. Trigg

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Barrie Colbath

0152120

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Alexandra Birt

0152121

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Raymond Gardner

0152122

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Martin Ruther

0152123

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ellen Fox

0152124

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Susan McNamara

0152125

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Marlene Tandler

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judy Nakadegawa

0152127

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Thoimas Boyles

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Mary` Glenn

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

I believe in personal choice in family planning. In fact, the Constitution protects us from religious impositions on our basic freedom. Religious fanatics are already denying women the right to choose an abortion even in dire circumstances. Yet no one is forcing women who do not want contraception to use it. But the choice should be a private one. Besides health concerns, over-population is a world-wide problem.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Janet Muir

0152130

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Zachary Stark-MacMillan

0152131

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ed Gartin

0152132

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Agnes Smith

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Joan Troxa

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Thomas Strunk

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Richard Whelan

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bobo Greenberg

0152137

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

I am appalled at the spurious notion promulgated by the religious right that women can "afford $5 coffee drinks but not $5 co-pays".

Sincerely,
Mr. Scott Roderick

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Elvis Cayford

0152139

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Terry McNicholas

0152140

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Who do these people think they are? More zealot attitudes. Don't let them take our freedoms away!

Sincerely,
Mr. Ted Barrett

0152141

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss Jacklyn Anderson

0152142

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Austin

0152143

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Christopher Foran

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Who do you think you are? Infringing on people rights. You people make me sick. You cock sucking bastards don't deserve civilized talk. Get off of your religious deities dick and clean the garbage of your faith out of your god damn ears and leave peoples rights and freedom alone. God is a business and you fucking worthless pieces of shit want to oppress with your faith. Fuck you and your worthless blinding faith. May you all choke on each others dicks you fucking assholes.

Sincerely,
Mr. Blake Caven

0152145

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sally Giles

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Rosenberg

0152147

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Stephanie Glover

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janie Thomas

0152149

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Shabanowitz

0152150

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss Sheryl McCabe

0152151

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Stephen Payne

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Carol Kuhr

0152153

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Kimberlee Trudeau

0152154

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. joyce banzhaf

0152155

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Linda Sullivan

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jeanabeth Halley

0152157

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

It strikes me as disingenuous that the US government pays for contraceptives for wild horses and refuses to support women who choose to use contraceptives.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mariann Maris

0152158

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jonathan Michals

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. PAMELA BURNS

0152160

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Earl Larsen

0152161

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Geraldine Karpel

0152162

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Warner

0152163

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

The very institutions that want to impose their religious objections to birth control oppose abortion. Abortion is not necessary if birth control is available. They do not have any objection to insurance paying for Viagra. Please do not allow religious zealots to keep women from having the health care services which women and their doctors choose.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Martin

0152164

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Hope Mclean

0152165

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Evelyn Hayhurst

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Trebor Gibson

0152167

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Gallagher

0152168

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. John & Leslie McKeon

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Mary Koehmstedt

0152170

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Patricia Luken

0152171

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Dalia Adeina

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Margret Ball

0152173

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Janet Bayer

0152174

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Charles Meyer

0152175

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Judith Lawrence

0152176

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Judith Lawrence

0152177

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Leah Hunt

0152178

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss seraptia seely

0152179

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

Please continue to fight against any infringement on our freedom and support every American's right to his or her own beliefs, religious and otherwise.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jennifer Sasseen

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ramona Hillier-O'Hara

0152181

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Kenneth Elmes

0152182

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Mark Stone

0152183

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Anna Rita Barron

0152184

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Michele Nihipali

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss Mary Jane Smythe

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Peter and Gert Coleman

0152187

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carole Damico

0152188

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Dan Deans

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jennifer Jones

0152190

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Dacia Dyer

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Daniel Fullerton

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Linda Smith Cohen

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Mary Owens

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Casey Jo Remy

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. G Bedrosian

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Mountrey

0152197

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Rita Deutsch

0152198

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gerard Deutsch

0152199

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Les Gorsuch

0152200

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Nancy Sopher

0152201

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Karen Winograde

0152202

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Madeline Johnson

0152203

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Donna Krause

0152204

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Betty Kenley

0152205

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Miss Samantha McKnight

0152206

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Lawrence Press

0152207

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Miriam Vieni

0152208

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Irene Schulman

0152209

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Pamela Hussey

0152210

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David McCray

0152211

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Wayne Mullins

0152212

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Dionne Graham

0152213

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Michael Wolf

0152214

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Sean Parrott

0152215

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Davidson

0152216

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steven Bodnar

0152217

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carol Hinkelman

0152218

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Gene Stewart

0152219

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Marcus Connaghan

0152220

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. HerbandLizzy Poole

0152221

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Isabelle Mogadam

0152222

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Arno Yaeckel

0152223

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Shelly Bekele

0152224

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families. Make sure the division between Church and State is maintained. A woman's right to decide her own reproductive choices MUST BE MAINTAINED. Please don't return up to the 'dark ages.'

Sincerely,
Ms. Renee Weiss

0152225

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Bob Bronfen

0152226

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jeff Gammill

0152227

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

This is 2011 ! FAMILIES SHOULD BE A QUESTION OF CHOICE AND FORETHOUGHT
!

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Robin Elms

0152228

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. PHYLLIS HOLCOMB

0152229

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Lawrence Blacik

0152230

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Arthur Murray

0152231

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. GHAY HOLCOMB

0152232

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Timothy Dunleavy

0152233

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Merritt Tilley Iii

0152234

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Lorna Bosnos

0152235

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Emily Schoales

0152236

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Megan Bott

0152237

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Rich Blair

0152238

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robert Banever

0152239

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Please make sure that this wonderful benefit for all of America, not just women comes to fruition! It is so important!

Sincerely,
Mrs. Christine Stewart

0152240

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Patrice Johnson

0152241

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Robb Leach

0152242

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sybil Kohl

0152243

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Bettina Bruning

0152244

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

President Obama,

This is another good idea that you'll probably fold on. Can't you stand for just one thing?

Sincerely,

Mr. Robert Woodruff

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

I strongly support the freedom for women to make their own choice relating to healthcare, birthcontrol and pregnancy. I support Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women.

Sincerely,
Mr. Zaki Sabih

0152246

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Larry Parker

0152247

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Beau Barnett

0152248

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Zsanine Alexander

0152249

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Michael Rabbino

0152250

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Jill Friedman

0152251

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Christine Schardt

0152252

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Tony Craney

0152253

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Andrea Reed

0152254

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Strong

0152255

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. David Jacques

0152256

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Jacobson

0152257

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carol Levy

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Virginia Peacock

0152259

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Barbara Petersen

0152260

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cecilia Carey

0152261

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John King

0152262

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Population growth is bad for the Earth.

Sincerely,
Mr. Timothy Mann

0152263

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Nicole Schwartz

0152264

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Hilda Andrews

0152265

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. William Caine

0152266

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Dorothy Brito

0152267

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judy Johnson

0152268

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Nancy Alicia Wayland

0152269

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

This goes against the Constitution of the United States, and was the reason why most of the American Immagrants came from Europe to the New land, to worship the way they wanted with religious freedom.

This goes against the Foundation of America.

Helping with Contraceptives will reduce health care costs that everyone including the Far Right, Insurance Companies are complaining about the cost to cover people on health care....I wonder why they do not get it?

Sincerely,
Mr. Alfred Peterson

0152270

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tj Helman

0152271

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Tj Helman

0152272

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Cheryl Lussier

0152273

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Joline Pelletier

0152274

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Steve Mendoza

0152275

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ariela Perez-Wallach

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Philip Abrahamson

0152277

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Julia Simic

0152278

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Abner Shimony

0152279

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Judith Kahle

0152280

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Wilma Wever

0152281

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. John Vojtisek

0152282

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Marilyn Stoknes

0152283

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

SeeThe new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

I couldn't say it any more clearly than what has been written above, but remember contraception avoids the use of abortions many many times. Not allowing contraception puts the total burden on the women. We need to keep state & church separate.

Sincerely,
Ms. Daphne Cooper

0152284

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Dr. Mary Meyers

0152285

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

Please prove that the HHS is comprised of actual, real human beings who are capable of intelligent thought and human emotion, and not merely puppets dancing on the strings of Puppet Masters who seek to control humans through refusing them the ability to make their own intelligent decisions.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. N Langley

0152286

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

No employer should have any ability to interfere in family planning.

No employer should have any ability to impose their religious tenets on employees.

Sincerely,
Ms. Susan Chandler

0152287

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Gwynn Schmid

0152288

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Susan Gilbert

0152289

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elaine Fischer

0152290

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Ronald Bandes

0152291

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Elaine Fischer

0152292

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Karly Larson

0152293

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

President Obama, please stop giving in to the pressures of the Republicans in Congress. and whoever else is pressuring you..you are beginning to lose support from those of us that have had so much faith in you.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Sue Halpern

0152294

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

A few years ago I spoke with some antichoice protestors picketing Planned Parenthood. I asked if they were against contraception as well as against abortion-"Absolutely." Then I asked if they supported the WIC program, food stamps, AFDC, public child care, or public preschool (Headstart); "Certainly not--all socialist programs." I summarized: So you believe that every time a woman has sex, she should produce a child and take care of it without any public assistance. Also, these particular five protestors also believed that if only a woman or a fetus could be kept alive, the fetus was most important to save. I wondered if it could be because it might be male.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mrs. Carol Lilleberg

0152295

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Carol Mcwhirter

0152296

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Jonathan Wohlschlag

0152297

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Donald Little

0152298

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us. But some groups are mounting a campaign to make the exceptions even broader in an attempt to diminish this step forward.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Howard Black

0152299

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. James Trimm

0152300

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Madelaine Matej

0152301

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Ms. Ursula Connolly

0152302

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. J. R. Bertram

0152303

Sep 1, 2011

Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,
200 Independence Avenue, SW
Washington, DC 20201

Subject: Protect Women's Access to Birth Control (CMS-9992-IFC2)

Dear Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services, Department of Health and Human Services, Room 445-G,,

I strongly support the Women's Preventive Services: Required Health Plan Coverage Guidelines, which will make effective birth control more affordable for millions of women. Women need access to contraceptives to prevent unintended pregnancies, plan the size of their families, and protect their health. Thank you for taking this very important step for women's well-being.

The new HHS policy also creates a special exception for certain religious employers, allowing them to deny coverage for contraceptive services. This exception must be limited to houses of worship or other institutions that primarily serve and employ people of the faith, and whose primary purpose is religious. Anything broader would harm women, compromise health care, and undermine religious liberty for all of us.

HHS should not permit institutions to impose their religious tenets on employees who do not share those beliefs. At its core, religious freedom means that we are all free to make personal decisions such as whether and when to use birth control based on our own beliefs and according to what is best for our health and the well-being of our families.

Sincerely,
Mr. Adam Vining

0152304